

The proposed method for determining mechanical properties of material by the analysis of the picture of the microstructure of the material is distinctive by determining, in the analysis process, the dimensions of the material particles, comparing the dimensions of the particles with the reference dimensions, and determining the mechanical properties of the material by the comparison results. To correct the mechanical properties, the data are used that are obtained by expert systems.