

A method of installation of hydraulic press by fastening columns with mobile traverse in the cross-beams by means of internal and external nuts, which are tightened first, and then under the load of press. The loading of press is achieved gradually up to the maximum working effort and is carried out the tightening of nuts after each loading with subsequent multiple displacement of mobile traverse.