

The proposed method for producing a reed pipe is distinctive by that the reed pipe is divided into a voice section and a section with sound holes. The method consists in cutting the voice hole, forming the partition for separating - air flux that enters the voice section, inserting a plug into the voice hole, joining the sections of the reed pipe, making the sound holes, and installing the valves on the holes. The sound holes have the same diameter.