

An installation for running liquid magnetization comprises a transformer, a magnetic conductor made from polymer material with beveled joints. In magnetic conductor made of polymer material a liquid channel is laid, which allows reducing level of utility magnetic field screening and provides regulating magnetic field power characteristic.