

A method for the differential formation of the social rehabilitation groups of the disabled persons in the centers of the professional rehabilitation provides for taking into account the following factors: the educational level, the vocational experience, the material state of the family, the term of the disability, the overall development level, the general ideas as to the future profession, the level of the speech habits, the public consciousness, hobbies, the habits of cultural behavior, the relations with the friends, the bad habits, the reaction to the own physical disability, the plans for the future, the educational institutions, where the disabled person studied.