

A vibration exciter contains two parallel drive shafts, which are installed in bearings in a housing and have unbalances, and the housing is made from two detachable bushings.