

A method for control of artillery gun after repair on interaction of its parts and mechanisms at which through use of inert missile elements of non-traditional system one provides decrease of cost of process of the gun control with increase of safety of control process.