

Method for economy of electrical energy at water supply from pump stations for water lift relates to branch of water supply at which water supply is performed with economy of electrical energy from pump station of first lift of water to fresh water tanks at night and use of method is possible for water supply at water line up to 175 km.