

A method of impregnation of wood includes preliminary heating wood by water vapor of atmospheric pressure, woodworking in the cold impregnating liquid. Heating wood is conducted by overheated unsaturated vapor with the temperature of 110-150 °C at repeated vapor circulation with takeoff from the flow circuit of condensate and exhaust vapor.