

An apparatus for work with ice, compacted snow and/or soil contains at least one working tool, inclined by a working base downward and installed on or in the base with possibility of rotation around a geometrical axis of rotation located transversely to movement thereof, and contains an electrical vibration drive. At least one power element of electrical vibration drive is located in a tubular holder.