

A device for ionization of air supplied to combustion chamber has a power supply block to which in sequence are connected a generator of signals and voltage multiplier to output of which electrode-activator is connected, this is large number of metal needle elements. The electrode-activator has positive potential.