

The frictional force regulation method includes determination of friction coefficient for a friction couple according to which the value and range of friction coefficient change is set and are compared them with values and at their deviation by means of change of inertia parameters, hardness and system element damping reaching conformity of a current friction coefficient of the friction couple to setting one.