

A heating boiler has a combustion chamber arranged as two coaxial cylinders, a bottom and a cover, burner with air distributor placed in the chamber, circuit of hot water supply connected to both cylinders and intermediate cylinder that is in the upper part of the chamber. The intermediate cylinder has double walls gap between which is connected to circuit of hot water supply.