

A method for monitoring and control of fuel combustion includes measuring of ion current in zones of flame jet and control of fuel supply on basis of comparison of those values. At ratio of current values when ion current of burning zone is larger than current of ignition zone one decreases ratio fuel/air. At ratio of values of current when ion current of burning zone is smaller than current of ignition zone one increases ratio fuel/air.