

A device for article orientation relates to mechanical engineering, namely to the devices for orientation of articles, including billets, for automatic loading into working positions of processing machines.