

The all-purpose microprocessor controller relates to basic discrete-impulse structure digital control used in production process automatic control systems in energetic, metallurgic, chemical, construction and other branches of production.