

A method of manufacturing means for applying image includes producing a first layer of transparent glossy film, on outer side of which an image is applied and the inner side is covered with a layer of glue, which connects the first layer with the second layer of paper with possibility of its separation. The image is applied by silkscreen process and for both layers are materials that are used for silkscreen process.