

The utility model relates to the systems used for producing carbides, namely, for production of transition group carbides, which are used in powder metallurgy to produce hard alloys and manufacturing cutting tools.