

An antiskid footwear device includes a base and an antiskid means. The base is made as a flat shaped plate of elastic material in which there are openings for putting the device on a nose piece and heel one of the footwear. The antiskid means made as a plate with at least four spikes, fixed thereon, directed opposite to the running part of the sole of the footwear is arranged between the openings for putting the device on.