

A method for automatic voltage regulation on buses of electric substations in which input voltage and current are measured, voltage of compensation current is shaped, voltage of compensation current and input voltage are summed. The obtained sum is compared to voltage setting; a command for regulation is formed. Values of transformation ratios a transformer for every phase and a command for regulation for every phase are calculated.