

A parquet module includes upper layer and has at one of side surfaces element for connection as a slot. The module includes additional lower layer, and the side surface that is opposite to the surface with the slot additionally includes connection element as a pin. At that the lower part of the connection element, the slot, and the upper part of the connection element, the pin, are arranged with shift to opposite sides.