

A method of manufacturing boiler pipes of austenitic steel includes producing refined hot-processed pipe billets. Then cold rolling billets is carried out for a few passes and thermally treated after each pass. After that the pipe is subject to drawing with subsequent annealing.