

Method for determination of fat-acid composition of lipid complex of maize through investigation of disorder of metabolism. One determines fat-acid composition of lipids of the root, stem and leaves of maize by means of gas-liquid chromatography, with determination of content of linoleic and linolenic higher fat acids with calculation of those in percent.