

Device for reveal of magnetic marks on steel cables includes two inductive indicators with common magnetic conductor along the axis of which a cable goes, excitation coils that are fed with alternating current, at that the output windings are connected by differential circuit. In the common magnetic conductor additional inductive indicators are placed with output windings connected by differential circuit.