

A process for production of “Morosha” vodka based on mineral water includes mixing ethyl rectified alcohol and mineral water. At that mineral water is subject to preliminary filtration through a filter filled with high-silica sand and exhausted active carbon. Water is softened by sodium-cation exchange filters.