

A tattoo machine comprises a fastening element with a clamp, a working element which holder is located in the opening of clamp, a coil with a core mounted on a fastening element, a head connected to the fastening element by a plate spring. The head is made as a lever. On the free vertical lever arm a permanent magnet between horizontal cores. An upper part of pusher of working element is attached to the outside of the free vertical arm of the head.