

A method for limiting an asynchronous motor reactive power relates to equipment for electric networks and can be used for compensation of reactive power in the industrial power systems.