

A method for local saturation of working surfaces of machine details comprises the saturation of ions of any metals in the media with discharge and introducing elements. The detail surface is previously coated with a layer of surface-active substances before implantation, selection of substances depends on material and properties of electrode and processed detail, with saturation by medium containing pulse electrical discharge of rectangular shape.