

A device for the preparation of carbon nanostructures contains housing, filled with working liquid, positive electrode in a form of series of electrodes and negative electrode, connected with voltage source, nozzles for inlet and outlet of working liquid. Positive electrodes are fixed with the possibility of movement. The housing has a form of cylindrical surface. Negative electrode is made in a form of variable nozzle-like inserts with different wall thickness.