

A method for grinding granular materials includes steps of feeding material into a grinding device, and mechanical grinding and activating the material by grinding elements, removal of the material from a working area. Inside the body of grinding device a pressure of the gaseous medium is maintained not greater than 0.35 of the atmosphere pressure.