

A grate section of a screen comprises two support beams with holes along their length, inclined grates secured in said holes by both ends and made in the form of rods of round cross section. The holes in the support beams are through. The lower ends of the rods interact with the support beam. The rods are equipped with locks to prevent longitudinal movement. The locks are made in the form of pins.