

A method for installation of a windmill on a passenger car, according to which the windmill is used to convert the kinetic energy of the disturbed air flow, at that the windmill is mounted on the roof of a passenger car, this makes it possible to use the unused kinetic energy of the natural atmospheric air flows and the disturbed air flow resulting from motion of the passenger car.