

Floating water inlet-filter unit comprises placed on the surface of water object floating support on which the casing with floating filter loading and water intake pipe with water intake nozzles is mounted, this is connected to the pump installed at the bank of the water object by means of a connection head and a flexible pipeline. The water intake pipe with water intake nozzles are placed together with floating filter loading in common working chamber of the housing, wherein the water intake nozzles are immersed to the floating filter loading and are arranged as drain, for example of the cap type.