

A method of transparent holographic creation, which consists of the holographic objects of the printed surface carrier material pressing and removal, where photo-polymerization composition applies on the printed surface, and this photo-polymerization composition is irradiated with UV light, and after that carrier material of the holographic objects is laid down and press on this surface, and this carrier material is irradiated with UV light in the contact zone.