

Protective pan for engine of vehicle with "Off Energy" system comprises a panel which has a complicated configuration and rigidly mounted on its inner surface a rigid add-on component equipped with shock-absorbing elements made of elastic material equipped with elements for fixation at the top. Shock-absorbing elements have the upper and lower parts inclined to each other. The lower part is formed at an angle to the inner surface of the panel forming a free space below the lower part.