

A unit for vibrowhirlwind formation of volumetric parts of headwears containing a rigid perforated forming element, which is attached to the bottom of a working chamber. In the body of the unit arranged are a disbalance disk, which provides horizontal shifting of the working chamber, and an electric motor, driving the activator that provides a rotational movement to the liquid-active working environment.