

A device for intensifying heat exchange, located in the channel of circular or rectangular cross-section and consists of two plates intersecting at an angle of  $90^\circ$ , wherein the plates are made corrugated.